

Drive your business in real time with the voice of your customers

Knowing what your customers really think is critical when exploring ways to improve the service you deliver to them. Having access to this information in real time supports you to create a self-learning organisation proven to increase customer satisfaction by 30%.

Bright's customer satisfaction surveying tool was designed based on over 10 years' analysis of top performing customer service organisations. The key features helping clients improve are:

- Accountability

If you can't break down customer feedback to the person responsible for it, you cannot drive change. Navigator shows staff, teams and departments side by side making it easy for managers to focus their support.

- 360° feedback

Even before any 1-2-1s have taken place, staff see their own results and the reasons for the customers' scores, creating an automatic self-learning environment.

- Intelligent analysis

The Bright Navigator incorporates simple to use tools helping you to identify the REAL drivers of your net promoter score and customer satisfaction, as well as the breaking points for them. This enables you to optimise your organisation's performance, delivering maximum quality at minimum cost.

Simple and Effective

Bright Navigator is a cloud application with no heavy up-front investment. Being accessible via a web browser means management can observe live performance from anywhere on any device.

For a small fee, you could be set up in less than a week, and you can trial the solution before you roll it out across your organisation.

How does it work?

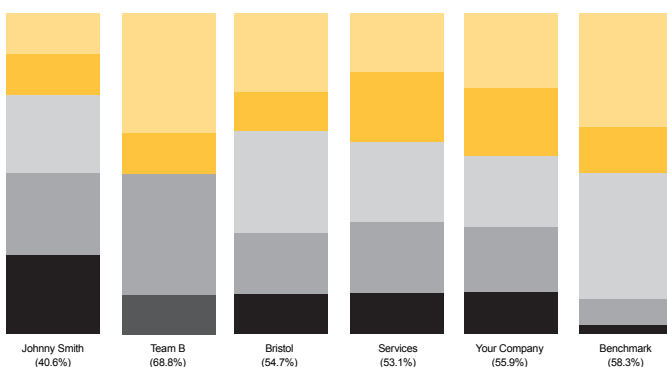

Gathering post contact feedback can be conducted in a number of ways, from emailed surveys to mobile text surveys or live and speech-based surveys. Crucially, the surveying takes place instantly, ensuring the experience cited is not influenced by other processes or opinions from third parties. This also improves take up rate and avoids disturbing the customers when they are busy doing something else.

CSAT by department, team and staff member

Customer satisfaction results can be broken down by organisational level, creating an unprecedented ability to see who the most effective staff members and teams are, not just the most efficient. The results can also be split by types of customer or department (such as contact centre, field representatives or branches).

Furthermore it includes benchmarking, showing you not only if results are better or worse than previous period, but if those results are good or bad in an industry context.

Automatic feedback for staff

Your people get access to immediate feedback on their own personal customer satisfaction compared to their team. This drives positive behaviour to improve service delivery, resulting in increased FCR, sales and customer satisfaction.

The real voice of the customer

In addition to the scores customers give you, recorded verbatim comments are stored as sound files to be listened to by staff and managers. The sound files can also easily be converted to text files, enabling you to do data mining and share the feedback with appropriate departments (such as marketing, product development, field service teams) creating a dynamic and customer centric organisation.

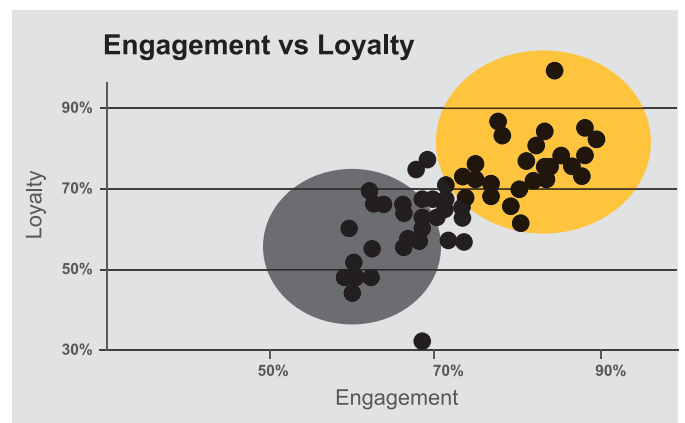

Combine CSAT scores with productivity metrics

Your most relevant performance indicators can be monitored automatically and presented on the system dashboard with a real time view of staff effectiveness. This could help you create balanced scorecards that staff incentives will be based on.

Extended intelligence for managers

Bright Navigator removes the guesswork in how metrics affect each other. It will inform your contact centre managers what the top five drivers of customer satisfaction or net promoter score are on a weekly basis.

For a team leader, the built in correlation tool will show both what those drivers are and who in the team are underperforming.
